Copeland ■■■ Continued from page 2

over the same information he shared with Elk Mountain.

The Medicine Bow audience listened and, afterwards, similar questions were voiced about the school being closed.

Copeland again made it clear no decisions had been made nor would they be made without listening to the communities. He said he understood the effect a school closing would have on any small community.

"But in order to have a school, you have to have students," Copeland said. "We can't teach if there is no bodies."

He said if a decision was to be made this year, it would be during the March board meeting because that was when the teachers contracts were renewed. A continuing status teacher who has been teaching in the district for three years had priority over an initial teacher who doesn't have tenure.

He made it known, although March board meeting was the crucial time to make decisions, it was not a given this year a decision would be made. It might be next year or the year after.

"The goal here is to share information and have the communities be a part of the decision making process," Copeland said. "Our overall concern is doing what is best for the students."

The Elk Mountain and Medicine Bow audiences listening to Copeland had to be encouraged that CCSD#2 was taking seriously their concerns about the declining enrollments without wanting to close the schools.
