Fremont Therapy's Sportsmetrics™ Program Gets Athletes Ready to Win! First Sign-ups are Free

With school athletics ready to start; Fremont Therapy's new Sportsmetrics™ program can help keep your athletes safe and strong. Athletes are competitive by nature, so there's always a push to jump higher, run faster and be stronger. The Sportsmetrics™ program is scientifically based and proven to reduce injuries while improving sports performance. The program is designed and structured to progress male and female athletes of any age from technique development to performance enhancement.

"Fremont Therapy Group is now a Certified Sportsmetrics™ Clinic," stated Brent Kaufman, MPT and partner. "Our athletic trainer, Zac Olivarez, ATC, LAT in Rawlins and our physical therapist, Tom Davis, MPT, CSCS in Lander recently attended the Cincinnati Sports Medicine & Orthopaedic Center to complete the comprehensive curriculum required to become certified Sportsmetrics trainers. Sportsmetrics trainers must have a degree in physical therapy or athletic training."

The Sportsmetrics™ program uses methods to reduce the potential for injuries typically sustained in non-contact situations such as landing from a jump, turning, and twisting activities. The program records how each athlete performs dynamic activities, and subsequently distinguishes certain postural imbalances that are risk factors for serious knee injuries like Anterior Cruciate Ligament (ACL) tears. And, did you know female athletes are at an even higher risk for ACL injuries than their male counterparts.

"To introduce this new program, we will offer one free training package for 4-6 athletes that will last for 6 weeks," Zac states. "We will meet 3 times a week, for six weeks. First, we'll focus on correct movement patterns during dynamic jumping techniques. The next phase in the program will offer guidance through high level jump techniques, improving both hip and knee stability through each landing phase. The last phase of the program focuses on speed and agility to improve athletic performance for the individual sport."

Don't be left on the sidelines this season, call us to join this first free session, or get a group of your teammates to form a session of your own. For more information call (307) 370-9175.
