things in practice over the week and (the girls) were able to apply those things on the court," Bartlett said. Shooting drills and repeatedly running the team's offensive schemes may have contributed to the strong outcomes in the coach's view. The last game of the weekend also proved to be the most challenging, Bartlett said. "The toughest team we played was Dubois," Bartlett recalled, and she said the Panthers went into the locker room at half down to the opposing Rams Dec. 17. "I told (the girls), 'you can either come out and win or fall apart and let them win.'" Apparently, the steely message had an effect: the Panthers returned to court fired-up and ultimately won the game by a comfortable 52-39 margin. Against Dubois, Bartlett said Saratoga had some difficulty winning rebounds but made up for the deficiency with 15 steals. Overall, the Panther girls "were able to space themselves a lot better and make better shots," Bartlett described the difference between the Shoshoni tournament and one hosted in Burns a week before. Whatever the cause, the Panthers seem to be a team headed into the holidays on a hot streak. Bartlett said she has scheduled several open gym sessions her athlete's can use to stay sharp, and that she is already thinking about the team's next contest Jan. 7 against Hanna-Elk Mountain. "(That game) will sneak right up after break," Bartlett said. There's little chance it will catch Bartlett, or her team, unprepared though.

basketball." Putting more than 20 points on the board, junior point guard Gage Bartlett also had an outsize impact in the comeback. By locking down Dubois' top threats and generating momentum-killing turnovers, the Panthers were able to swing the game in their favor and go into the break with a win streak. In the interim, Williams said his team will enjoy a little time off and heal-up. Senior post Max Schneider was nursing a turned-ankle while playing in Thermopolis, and Williams said he hoped the rest will help his athletes rebound to better form. "The toughest part about break is losing conditioning," Williams said, but the team will have a few practices to prevent the athletes from packing on too many holiday pounds. The Panthers' next game is Jan. 7 against Hanna-Elk Mountain (HEM), but the stakes really get high the week after. "The meat of our season starts in January when we start to have conference games," Williams said. The first of those will be a Jan. 13 match-up against Farson-Eden, but for now the Panthers are just resting up, preparing for HEM and savoring a the taste of victory during the holiday gap.
