INSURANCE | Auto Repairs

Consumer considerations for choosing a repair shop

Your vehicle has been damaged, and you've filed a claim with your insurance company for repairs. Now what?

FIRST

Know your rights.

You are entitled to choose whether after-market or original equipment manufacturer (OEM) parts are used in the required repairs. Additionally, you are entitled to a written estimate of repairs from whichever repair shop you choose to use.

SECOND

Know your repair facility.

If you don't already have a relationship with a repair shop, then ask around. Ask friends and families for recommendations of repair shops with whom they've had good experiences.

Additionally, check for shops on consumer review sites such as Yelp. Be sure to check out the potential shops in person to determine cleanliness, experience, qualifications, etc. Ask questions about how the repair facility bills, how they handle payment, how they handle disputes regarding the total cost of repair, and whether they offer any warranties on their repairs.

THIRD

Know your lease.

If your vehicle is leased, read your lease agreement carefully. The lease agreement may specify what parts can or cannot be used in repairs. Failure to abide by terms of the agreement may cost additional money at the end of your lease term.

LASTLY

Know your insurance company and policy.

Read your policy completely to make sure you understand what is and is not covered.

Some insurance companies may recommend taking your vehicle to one of its preferred repair shops, but are you required to do so? The answer is no.

You have the right to choose which body shop you take your vehicle for repairs. However, using your company's preferred shop may offer advantages such as:

- Faster service
- Less paperwork
- Potential discounts

- Warranties on completed repairs.

If you choose to use a facility not recommended by your insurance company, be prepared to do some legwork. The insurance company may require you to obtain several estimates from multiple shops for review and comparison of the work needed.

The insurance company may also require you to take and send photos of the vehicle damage for their inspection and claim file. Additionally, once the claim is paid, you may be required to make final payment to the body shop upon completion of the repairs. Some disadvantages to using a non-preferred shop are:

- Negotiations with both the insurance company and repair shop may be required
- Delays in repairs being completed.
- Shorter or no warranties on repairs; however, any part warranties may still apply.

Remember, the body shop is fixing YOUR vehicle for YOU, and it's important that you're comfortable with the shop you choose regardless of their status with your insurance company.
