General Assignment Reporter Position at the Saratoga Sun

You: You love to tell the stories of those around you and know there's a story behind the story. You're community-minded and community-driven. You enjoy talking to people, have a passion for writing and are looking to begin or further a career.

Us: We're the Platte Valley's newspaper. We're one of the state's pioneer publications, established two years before Wyoming was granted statehood. Like you, we're community-minded and community-driven. We take our role in the community of watchdog and the first-draft of history seriously. The Saratoga Sun has won multiple awards from the Wyoming Press Association over the years including several individual awards for articles and column writing, as well as Editorial Excellence.

What we expect: A general assignment reporter will be expected to cover a wide-variety of subjects ranging from high school prep sports to local government meetings, writing feature articles on Valley residents and reporting on the outdoor recreation and tourism of the area. The ideal candidate for this position is familiar with word processing programs such as Microsoft Word or Google Docs.

What we can provide: Previous experience is preferred, training can be provided. We also provide Paid Time Off and 401(k) after one year.

Where you will be working: Nestled between the Snowy Range and Sierra Madre mountains, amenities range from fly fishing and hiking in the summer to ice fishing and snowshoeing in the winter. Saratoga is also home to one of the first microbreweries in Wyoming and has a growing food scene. Finally, there's the natural hot springs, free to the public and open 24/7.

The Details: This is a salaried position with a flexible schedule and pay dependent on experience. If interested in the position, or for more information, please email Joshua Wood at wood.saratogasun@gmail.com.

Chatting with the Chief: Those Doggone Deer

SPD Chief Mike Morris talks deer in town, increasing number of dog calls in Saratoga

By Joshua Wood,
Stevenson Newspapers

Saratoga Police Chief Mike Morris spoke with the Saratoga Sun regarding calls to his department regarding deer along with what seems to be an increase in dog calls.

Saratoga, like other towns in Wyoming, has had its own urban deer population which can cause issues for the police department in the form of various calls. With the onset of hunting season, the rural deer can also make their way into town and both populations can end up hit by a vehicle. They can also be a nuisance to homeowners who try to keep the ungulates out of their yards and garden.

"Statutorily, wildlife falls under the Wyoming Game and Fish Department. When it comes to wildlife in town, we do have the ability to deal with them in conjunction (with the WGFD). Anytime there is a wild animal, we normally get a hold of the game and fish as well," said Morris. "As far as the nuisance animals, you see a lot of fences that are raised a little higher than normal to keep the deer out of vegetation."

Earlier this year, said Morris, his department received a call regarding a deer which had become stuck in a tomato cage. Upon answering the call, the department took the deer down safely and removed the cage. According to Morris, anytime there is a nuisance deer, Saratoga residents can call the police department for help.

"They can call us if they have a nuisance problem and then we can get a hold of the game and fish and come up with an action for it. The deer are a little bit hard to deal with, everybody still deals with the wildlife," said Morris. "It's part of why we live here, part of why we love it here. It can be a problem sometimes."

More than just being an occasional nuisance, deer can also cause significant damage to vehicles in the case of collisions. Morris said twice this week, he had responded to two calls of deer which had been struck by vehicles. He said it is very important that when collisions happen, they are reported.

"Normally there is damage to the vehicle. The other thing is if after it's it if it's still in the road it does create a hazard. We'd like to take care of it as quickly as we possibly can," said Morris. "If you do hit a deer, it's important to call and report it."

Morris believes it is important to communicate the importance of being aware of deer in the roadways to the motoring public, especially when it comes to Saratoga's sidestreets.

Along with deer, another animal issue the police department deals with are dog calls. The calls range from barking dogs to dogs roaming free in town. This year, said Morris, there is an apparent increase in dog-related calls.

It goes in spurts but in reviewing the calls, right now we're well worth 200 animals calls this year. That's animals collectively, anything from running at large, dogs barking," said Morris. "We've had some animals that have killed cats."

Those 200 calls are with just over 260 days surpassed in the year. The most frequent calls Morris has been getting, he said, are complaints about barking dogs.

"When we're living in a neighborhood, we try to be neighborly. We need to keep track of our animals, we need to make sure if they're barking that we control them. They can't be left out at all hours," said Morris. "Just be courteous when it comes to the barking dogs. Be aware of what your dogs are doing."

Morris noted there is an ordinance regarding barking dogs. Indeed, under section 6.08.120 of the municipal code it is illegal to own or keep a dog within town limits "any dog which by continuing barking, howling or yelping disturbs the quiet of any neighborhood or person."

Occasionally, along with barking dogs, there are also instances of dogs chasing town deer. According to Morris, this is something for which the owner can be found liable.

"The owner of the dog can be held criminally responsible for their animal that's out chasing wildlife," said Morris. Probably the worst consequence is that an animal can be destroyed. That's something that nobody wants to do."

According to the WGFD website, the owner of a dog that is harassing big game can face up to six months in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Keep Your Home Cozy in Cool Weather With These Upgrades

When the temperatures drop and the precipitation turns cold, efficiently keeping your home cozy and warm is likely a top priority.

As you make home upgrades this fall, be sure to use materials designed to withstand extreme weather events and which help manage indoor climate control. Doing so will mean greater comfort and more affordable energy bills, not only when it's cold, but all year long.

Roofing

As your first defense against all kinds of weather, your roof sustains a lot of wear and tear. Consider prioritizing durability, strength and weather resistance in a new roof by opting for metal. The good news? You can get a classic appearance with this material, thanks to updates in roofing technology. For example, the energy-saving metal roofing offered by ProVia has the textured appearance of natural slate or shake shingles, but is constructed of highly durable 26-gauge steel, for added strength and lifetime protection from wind, rain, hail and corrosion.

Siding

Is your home is ever drafty or chilly when the temperatures drop and the wind kicks up? The culprit may be insufficient insulation. Keep in mind that most wall insulation is placed only between the studs, and wall studs make up to 25% of the wall surface of an average home. You can fill in these insulation gaps with insulated vinyl siding that's been tested and proven to increase the R-value (a measure of a material's resistance to heat flow) of an exterior wall. One of the most energy-efficient exterior claddings on the market, CedarMAX insulated vinyl siding is one such choice that can help reduce your energy bills. Plus, its strong, rigid foam backing offers greater impact resistance against rain, hail, sleet and snow, making a siding upgrade a good project to consider before the first winter storm.

Windows

Windows are a common point of heat transfer, and as such, they play a huge role in the comfort of your home. It's not often that you have to purchase windows for your home, but when you do, you'll want to ensure that they deliver the best in energy efficiency and comfort. ProVia's vinyl windows, for example, are ENERGY STAR-certified, to help keep your home warm in winter (and cool in summer).

Interior Décor

You may not think about your interior decorating choices as something that could potentially improve your home's energy efficiency, but many such updates will not only make your home look more cozy, they'll actually help keep it warm. Thick area rugs are a good place to start, as they provide insulation underfoot. Likewise, cellular shades or Roman shades can help stop heat transfer around windows, and wall tapestries or fabric-like wallpaper can provide a touch more insulation on walls.

To learn more about building and renovating with comfort and energy savings in mind, visit provia.com.

By selecting the right products during a renovation, you can prepare your home for greater comfort and energy savings in cool weather.
