Meet the Teachers

Alyssa Lewark

Alyssa Lewark will be the new agriculture teacher at Hanna, Elk Mountain and Medicine Bow (HEM) High School and is looking forward to helping further develop what she sees as an already great program.

Lewark graduated from the University of Wyoming the year before and taught for a year in Nebraska. While going to college, she student taught in Buffalo, Wyoming.

"I'm really looking forward to the community and just kind of building on top of the really great things that are already in the Ag program," said Lewark. "It's already a strong Ag program. I think my officers could probably run it on their own. I'm just really looking forward to working with the students."

Anthea Teska

Anthea Teska will be the new Special Education teacher at Saratoga Middle High School and brings a wealth of experience to the position. Before accepting this position, Teska most recently worked for Carbon County School District No. 1 where her job kept her duties split between Rawlins Middle School and Baggs.

"I have about 20 years of experience from New York State between working in elementary, middle and high school special education as well as administrative internships in New York," said Teska.

While at Carbon County School District No. 1, Teska was the special education coordinator and part of her job was to monitor the programming and paperwork for all special education in Rawlins Middle School and Little Snake River Valley.

"I'm looking forward to living and working in the same town," Teska said. "I miss being able to easily access the activities that the kids do and to be able to participate that way and to be more involved with the school district because it is closer to home."

Anthony Hudson

Anthony Hudson will be the new Special Education teacher at Hanna Elementary School. Most recently from Carbon County School District No. 1, Hudson brings a broad educational experience to the position.

"I have a gamut of experience. I've done general education, I've done special education, I've done pretty much everything I can think of K through 12," said Hudson. "This is my 17th year of teaching, total, so I'm a veteran." When asked what he was looking forward to, Hudson said, "I think the new challenges, the new staff. Being able to bring the ideas I have to the table and being part of a professional learning community. I'm just excited."

Daniel Greenwood

Daniel Greenwood might be a familiar face to longterm residents of the Valley. Greenwood and his sisters attended Encampment K-12 School and he graduated from in the year 2000. He is returning to his alma matter as the new science teacher, a position he appeared very excited for.

Before pursuing teaching, Greenwood earned both a Bachelor's of Science and a Masters of Science from the University of Wyoming. When he returned to the area, he snagged a teaching internship in Casper at the Casper Mountain Science Program.

"That's how I kind of got the teaching bug," said Greenwood. "Heard there was a teaching position open in science in Encampment. Applied and very quickly got an interview and got hired."

Greenwood is looking forward to returning to the school that educated him and "give back."

"I love the education I got at Encampment when I was there," Greenwood said. "Coming full circle and giving back a little bit, drop a little knowledge. I love science, so I want to spark that interest in the youth so we can have some future scientists come out of Encampment."

Debbie McCully

Debbie McCully will be the new reading interventionist at Hanna Elementary School, Medicine Bow Elementary School and Elk Mountain Elementary School. Before coming to Carbon County School District No. 2, McCully was in Lander where she taught at Arapahoe High School on the Wind River Indian Reservation.

"I bring several years of teaching experience," said McCully. "I've worked through high school, middle school, elementary school. I've worked in speech and language and then I also have some business behind me."

Of the new school year and what she's looking forward to, McCully said, "Just working with the kids and getting to know new people and enjoying this beautiful area."

2 COOL 2B 4gotten

Ellie Skalberg

Ellie Skalberg will be the new 3rd grade teacher at Saratoga Elementary School this year. Skalberg just recently graduated from the University of Wyoming, but grew up in the neighboring Little Snake River Valley. While working towards her degree, Skalberg student taught in Powell.

When asked what she was most looking forward to for the new year, Skalberg said, "I think my biggest thing is just building the relationships with my students and letting them know that they are loved and cared for. That they are going to figure out and learn more things about themselves and more things than just paper and pencil."

Jamie Lee

Jaimie Lee will be one of several new faces at Saratoga Elementary School this year as she arrives to teach Kindergarten. Lee, who grew up in Dubois, has previous elementary experience as she taught 3rd grade in Basin, Wyoming and student taught 4th grade.

"I've also been volunteering in 2nd grade (and) kindergarten," Lee said. "My mom's been a teacher for 44 years, so I've always been in her classroom volunteering and hanging out with her whenever I can."

When asked what Lee is looking forward to about her new position, she said, "That community involvement with the kids and just being involved with bringing the kids into kindergarten. Getting them into that school. That excitement."

Katherine Munson

Coming into Encampment K-12 School as the new Family and Consumer Sciences teacher, one would have big shoes to fill following the retirement and semi-return of Cheryl Munroe. Fortunately for Katherine Munson, she had the opportunity to student teach under Munroe last school year.

"She took me under her wing and showed me the ropes," said Munson. "It's been amazing and I was able to get the job for Family (and) Consumer Sciences."

Munson admits that, while she is fairly green when it comes to teaching, she has utilized what she learned from Family and Consumer Sciences in her life.

"Student teaching showed me that it's awesome," Munson said. "It's exactly where I want to be and I'm really excited."

When it comes to the upcoming school year, Munson said she is excited to work with the students.

"Just having relationships with the students, teaching life skills so they can utilize them throughout their life like I did," said Munson.

Laura Nicewender

Laura Nicewender will be the latest administrator to step into the position of three school principal in the northern part of Carbon County School District No. 2 as the new principal for Hanna Elementary School, Medicine Bow Elementary School and Elk Mountain Elementary School.

"I came from Albany County School District No. 1," said Nicewender. "I actually just finished 20 years as a special education teacher at Laramie High School."

Nicewender was born and raised in Albany County and all her kids were Albany County graduates, though she does have family in Carbon County.

In addition to her two decades of special education experience at Laramie High School, Nicewender also worked in Headstart for four years and worked at the Cathedral Home for Children in Laramie. Coming to a rural place like the northern part of the district, Nicewender is looking forward to getting to know the people.

"I'm actually looking forward to the communities," Nicewender said. "Being able to connect with the people in the communities. I have a lot of high regard for the people that live in the country and live in the less connected places. Less politics, less entitlement and a little more salt of the earth."

Nikkole Schneider

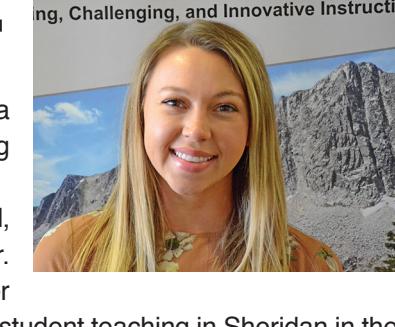

Nikkole Schneider will be teaching 5th grade at Saratoga Elementary School this year. Like other first year teachers hailing from Wyoming, she is used to the rurality.

"I am from Clark, Wyoming which is about 30 minutes from Powell, Wyoming which is where I graduated high school," said Schneider.

Following her graduation from Powell High School, Schneider earned her degree at the University of Wyoming. She was doing student teaching in Sheridan in the spring semester of the last school year, which was cut short due to the novel coronavirus. While there, however, she also student taught in 5th grade, so there will not be much of a transition.

Schneider also worked at Ark Regional Services in Laramie, which she believes will also add to her toolbox of teaching while in Saratoga.

"I'm so excited to just see my kids on the first day of school and start developing those relationships with them and make it their home away from home," said Schneider. "I also can't wait to meet all my other teammates at Saratoga Elementary and just become part of this community."

Rachel Johnson

Rachel Johnson will be the second new kindergarten teacher at Saratoga Elementary School this year. Johnson's husband, J.D., will be the new principal at Saratoga Middle High School. While Johnson has 18 years of experience in education, most of it comes from teaching junior high and high school social studies.

This will be her first year teaching kindergarten.

When asked what she was looking forward to about the new year, Johnson replied, "A new challenge in teaching. It's an opportunity for me to grow as an educator."

Tyra Relaford

Tyra Relaford is not exactly a stranger to the Valley. Before applying for and accepting the position of English teacher at Saratoga Middle High School, she student taught in Encampment before graduating from the University of Wyoming.

In addition to the student teaching she did at Encampment K-12 School, Relaford also taught preschool as she went through college, among other things.

"I used to teach at the English Language Center at the University of Wyoming," said Relaford. "I taught students from all over the world. It was kind of an ESL (English as a Second Language) type situation."

When asked what she was looking forward to, Relaford said, "I'm excited for everything. All the experiences."
